Additional Information – include any information of note

Henry Appleby, Henry's father, was a cork cutter – one of 6 people employed in that trade in Newcastle in 1881 – working with cork to make stoppers for bottles and other containers. His sisters Mary Helen and Ann went on to be school teachers. In both the 1901 and 1911 census records he is shown as a clerk in a steamship owner's office. This does not line up with either his immigration statement that he was a farmer or his attestation paper statement that he was a bank clerk. He emigrated to Canada in July 1912.

He was called up to service in November 1917 when he was living in Donald, BC. Donald had been an important railway town about 3 miles west of Golden but was abandoned by the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1897. Since then it declined and is now little more than a ghost town.

I was unable to find any other information on Henry Appleby. He does not appear in the 1921 Canadian Census of in the B.C. Death registration data base.
